Davis Foley is the IT Manager at the Peoples' Self-Help Housing \(PSHH\), a non-profit agency that provides affordable housing in California. They build and develop apartments for seniors and low-income families. To ensure their success, PSHH relies on quick and easy collaboration between its 177 employees spread across 50 different locations. For a growing organization dispersed across so many different offices, keeping everyone at PSHH on the same page can be quite the challenge for Foley's small IT staff.

Originally, the non-profit was leveraging Dropbox for file storage and collaboration company-wide. However, the expensive pricing structure didn't work for the growing business. Paying per user was not a feasible model. His managed service provider (MSP), who helps ease the burden and outsource some IT responsibilities, suggested he check out Datto Drive, a business-grade file sync and share solution that allows users to collaborate and share files. Datto Drive has a more flexible pricing model that fits the needs of their business.

"Before Datto Drive, our employees often had to log in remotely through a remote desktop. Now they can simply hop on Datto Drive if they need to access any files," said Foley.

Datto Drive has gone a long way toward simplifying things for PSHH, especially in their Human Resources Department. "With our company's rapid growth, the application process was inefficient. Now, applicants can go to our website and share their resume via Datto Drive," said Foley.

Sharing files with subcontractors has been simplified as well, thanks to Datto Drive. PSHH often had headaches when sharing spec sheets or building plans. Now, subcontractors can easily access Datto Drive from the PSHH website. "We used to go back and forth sharing links, but now this is a simplified, streamlined process that has been incredibly helpful for us. Datto Drive has simplified and improved our workflow in so many ways."
